Marking / Identifying Web Products

December 10, 2007

Safety Connection, Inc. does not recommend marking directly on the webbing portion of any piece of fall protection equipment. Permanent markers may contain chemicals that cause deterioration of webbing products. If equipment needs to be identified by some means other than the serial number, Safety Connection recommends writing on blank labels or other areas designated for marking by the manufacturer.

My opinion is that any printing or marking of webbing should be done by the webbing manufacturer. The webbing manufacturer has the ability to perform certification testing of the breaking strength of the webbing prior to fabrication.

Marking of webbing by someone other than the webbing manufacturer opens the door for abuse by exposing the webbing to unknown chemicals and or marking techniques.
